GAMES

Over or under?

Rewrite the rules on the traditional over-and-under relay team game by substituting the ball/balloon with a roll of toilet paper. The loo roll is passed over the first person's head and then between the next person's legs, and so on, and the paper is unravelled as the roll travels. If the toilet paper breaks, the team must tie it together before continuing. For added excitement, the roll also travels back to the start of the line. The winners are the first team to get the roll back to the start.

Toilet-bowling, anyone?

Add excitement to a familiar ball game (eg skittles, basketball, benchball) by substituting the ball for a loo roll, with hilarious results. A loo roll dunked in water adds to the drama, but also the mess.

A brush with disaster

Many games (eg hockey, mini-golf) can be given a new lease of life by replacing the club/stick with a (brand-new) toilet brush. (Don't even think of using pre-used ones...)

It's in the bag

Fill an old pillow case with bathroom-related items: rubber duck, soap, loo roll, plug, plastic/fake poo etc. Tie up the end with an elastic band. Invite your guests to guess as many items as they can by feeling the contents through the pillowcase. No peeking! Turn this into a competition by creating two pillowcases for two teams and see which team guesses the most items correctly.

A toilet twist to favourite party games

Many traditional party games can be made toilet-astic with a bit of imagination. Pin the flush on the toilet, limbo under the loo roll, hunt the toilet roll...

CRAFT CHALLENGES

Toilet tailoring

Present each team with one or more toilet rolls and some sticky tape and challenge them to produce the most imaginative outfit, modelled by a team member, in a given timeframe.

Cardboard sculpturing

Provide each team with a number of toilet rolls centres, some glue, paint, scissors and sticky tape. Set them a creative building challenge: a life-size latrine, the best representation of a flushing loo, the tallest sculpture, the most life-like sculpture of your group leader, etc.

Original origami

Have a competition to find out who can make the best origami creation out of toilet paper. If you need inspiration, there's a worrying amount of ideas online...
